Welcome!

Welcome to Swann's digital imprint—a new editorial experience of the traditional auction catalogue. Swann takes pride in our catalogues, but until now, technology had not caught up with the scholarship and care we give to every lot. We're proud to share this new platform with you, which presents all the same lots as can be found elsewhere on our website, but in a reading-friendly format.

Special features:

- Bookmarking lots
- Bidding directly through Swann's main website (you may need to log into your swanngalleries.com account, if you haven't recently).
- Requesting Condition Reports.
- Searching by keyword throughout the catalogue.

This new version of our online catalogue is currently being beta tested. We welcome your feedback and patience as we make it even better. Please feel free to contact Alexandra Nelson, CMO, with any questions about the site: alexandra@swanngalleries.com.

Cudworth was part of the movement of Cambridge Platonists, in the late 17th century. "The Platonists constructed a natural theology supporting the concept of free will, and opposing the materialism of Thomas Hobbes. To its members, there was no natural divide between philosophy and theology. Reason could, therefore, sort out rival theological and ethical claims without the violence that had troubled their generation.' (see Charles M. Richards on The Eusebius Pamphilus (260/265-339/340 Ce)

Ecclesiasticae Historiae.

Paris: Robert Stephanus, 1544.

Editio princeps, thick folio, woodcut device to title, text in Greek, printed in Garamond's newly designed typeface, last leaf (blank but for Estienne's device) present in this copy, bound in 17th century calf boards, tooled in blind panels, neatly rebacked, ex libris Philip Lyttleton Gell, with bookplate, a complete and exceptionally fresh copy, including the blank leaf P5, 13 x 8 1/2 in.

This production of the Estienne press signals not only the first edition of Eusebius's complete works, it is also the debut of the storied "grecs du roi" typeface, designed by Claude Garamond. The Royal Library at Fontainebleau contained a trove of unpublished Greek manuscripts at the time, and François I felt that they deserved a typeface worthy of their importance. Also for the first time, Estienne used a stunning new set of matching woodcut head-pieces and display initials.

Germain, Pierre, Le Roman (1703-1783)

Elements D'Orfevrerie Divisés En Deux Parties De Cinquante Feuilles.

Paris: Se Vendent Chez l'Auteur, Place du Carousel à l'Orfevrerie du Roy, 1748.

First edition, small folio, two parts in one volume, both signed on title pages by Germain; “avec privilege du Roy” also written in a contemporary hand below the imprint date in first part; both parts engraved throughout, illustrated with 100 full-page plates of various rococo wares for churches and wealthy patrons' homes; some water staining to part two, bound in contemporary half speckled sheepskin, marbled paper-covered boards, two labels on spine, 9 3/4 x 7 1/2 in.

Germain's work was the largest model book for silver- and goldsmiths of its time. A valuable reference to subsequent craftspeople, it has been reprinted, including in Diderot's Encyclopedie. Germain was a royal goldsmith, almost every design illustrated are his own, with the inclusion of several etchings of sketches by Jacques Roettiers (1707-1784).

Roettiers was commissioned to create work for the Dauphin that was uncompleted at the time this book was published. For more, see Hélène Cavalié's “Un manuel d'ornements et son influence : les Éléments d'orfèvrerie de Pierre Germain,” <https://books.openedition.org/editionscnrs/27751?lang=en>.

Manuscript On Paper.
The Retreat, A Sentimental Fragment
Interspersed With Dialogues.

Britain, 1817.

Quarto format manuscript on laid paper with 1815 watermarks, title page very neatly done in a calligraphic hand incorporating several lettering styles, 328 numbered pages; each leaf lined, written in a neat italic hand brown ink, very faint inscription to title page that may be the author's name, approximately twenty-four lines per page, in later half calf, marbled paper boards, some toning, offsetting to contents, some signatures sprung, 9 x 7 1/4 in.

The author, who only identifies himself with the initials N.P., has composed this work because, "a father's best legacy to his children are lessons demonstrative of piety." We may also infer that our writer had a connection to the sea as several of his dialogues are nautical in nature, and to that end he offers five pages in which he defines "Sea Terms," after the last numbered page 328.

This catalogue advertises Cardinal Polignac's (1661-1742) great collection of ancient marble art, which included colossal, life-size, and half life-size statuary, busts, bas-reliefs, urns, columns, carved inscriptions, and other Greek and Roman antiquities. Polignac acquired these objects as he dabbled in archeology in Rome in the 1730s. The auctioneer, Coignard, states that the collection may either be sold in parts as a whole. From what this cataloguer could gather, Frederick the Great (1712-1786) purchased the collection outright.

Sammelband Of Five Works, 1599-1606.

Including: Aubert Le Mire's (1573-1640) Origines Coenobiorum Benedictinorum in Belgio, Antwerp: H. Verdussen, 1606; Le Mire's Elenchus Historicorum Belgii, nondum Typis Editorum, Antwerp: H. Verdussen, 1606; Erycius Puteanus's (1574-1646) De Erycio Nomine Syntagma. Item Iuli Paridis de Nominibus Epitome, Hanau: C. de Marne & Heirs of J. Aubry at the Wechel Press, 1606; Jean Cousin's De Prosperitate et exitio Salominis, Douai: J. Bogard, 1599; [and] Didier Herauld's (1575-1649) Adversariorum Libri Duo, Paris: J. Perier, 1599; five octavo titles bound in one volume, in contemporary speckled sheepskin with gilt spine and label, ex libris Nord Kirchern Library with bookplate pasted inside front board, binding slightly rubbed, generally very good, 6 1/2 x 4 in.

This interesting sammelband contains five rare works, all first editions, on philological and theological subjects by living Flemish and French scholars. Le Mire writes on the origin and history of the Benedictine order, attacking the Reformation. His second title is a catalogue of unpublished manuscripts held by ecclesiastical institutions, written with an aim to have said manuscripts published. Puteanus, a pupil of Lipsius, does a deep dive into the etymology of his own first name, Eric, and includes some personal autobiographical details. Belgian historian and canon of the Tournai cathedral, Cognatus [aka Jean Cousin] writes a dissertation on King Solomon. Finally, professor of law and Greek Herauld goes with the classics, commenting on Diogenes Laertius, Herodotus, Pindar, Plautus, Aristotle, Cicero and Juvenal. He then shares his extensive critique of the recently published [Heidelberg, 1598] editio princeps of Iamblichus's Life of Pythagoras.

First edition, nine small octavo volumes; volumes V, VII, and IX signed by the author, "L. Sterne," at the head of the opening chapter; first volume with black page; volume III with engraved frontispiece; marbled leaf present in volume IV; half-titles present in volumes IV, V, VI, and IX; volumes, I, II, III, VII, and IX expertly rebacked; volumes V and VIII with front board detached; ex libris Arthur M. Brown; Edward P. Borden; and Winston H. (9)

A fine set of one of the greatest comic novels in the English language, Sterne's irreverence and humor fly in the of modern assumptions about the dry pedantry of 18th century writers and thinkers. Standing on the shoulders of Rabelais and Cervantes, the story is lively, self-aware, and especially enjoyably read in the first edition.

Folio, printer's device on title, large woodcut on verso of title, illustrated with numerous full-paged woodcuts, ruled in red throughout; bound in an ornate faux renaissance binding by Théodore [aka Louis] Hagué (1822-1891), with multi-color onlaid leather, intricate interweaving plant forms, flowers, stylized dolphins, and raised gesso fleur-de-lys, among other motifs, with cast corner-pieces, bosses, catches and clasps, edges gilt, painted, and gauffered, front board detached, leather somewhat dry and flaking in places, one clasp extension cracked, all pieces present; very good impressions of the woodcuts, 12 1/4 x 8 in.

“Théodore Hagué (1822-1891), also known as Louis, is perhaps the most notorious forger of fine early modern bindings. He worked for a time at the London bookbinding firm of Zaehnsdorf's, as well as privately for the Duke d'Aumale, restoring his library. By the early 1860s, then living in Brussels, it apparently occurred to him to try his skills against the ultimate test: attempt to pass his bindings off as authentic.” (For more, cf.  22 For these bee the dayes of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled.
 23 But woe vnto them that are with childe, and to them that giue sucke in those dayes, for there shall be great distresse in the land, and wrath vpon this people.
 24 And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be ledde away captiue into all nations, and Hierusalem shall be troden downe of the Gentiles, vntill the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.
 25 * And there shall be signes in the Sunne, and in the Moone, and in the Starres, and vpon the earth distresse of nations, with perplexity, the Sea and the waues roaring.
 26 Mens hearts failing them for feare, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; For the powers of heauen shall be shaken.
 27 And then shall they see the Sonne of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.
 28 And when these things begin to come to passe, then looke vp, and lift vp your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.
 29 And he spake to them a parable, Behold the figge tree and all the trees,
 30 When they now shoot forth, yee see and know of your owne selves, that Summer is now nigh at hand.
 31 So likewise yee, when ye see these things come to passe, know yee that the kingdome of God is nigh at hand.
 32 Verily I say vnto you, this generation shall not passe away, till all be fulfilled.
 33 Heauen and earth shall passe away, but my wordes shall not passe away.
 34 * And take heed to your selves, lest at any time your hearts bee overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come vpon you vnawares.
 35 For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.
 36 Watch yee therfore, and pray alwayes, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to passe, and to stand before the Sonne of man.
 37 And in the day time hee was teaching in the Temple, and at night hee went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives.
 38 And all the people came early in the morning to him in the Temple, for to heare him.

C H A P. XXII.

1 The Iewes conspire against Christ, 3 Satan preparerth Iudas to betray him. 7 The Apostles prepare the Pascheouer. 19 Christ instituteth his holy Supper, 21 couertly foretelleth of the traitour, 24 deborteth the rest of his Apostles from ambition, 31 assurereith Peter his faith should not faile: 34 and yet he should deny him thrise. 39 He prayeth in the Mount, and sweateth blood, 47 is betrayed with a kisse: 50 he healeth Malchus eare, 54 hee is thrise denied of Peter, 63 shamefully abused, 66 and confesseth himselfe to be the Sonne of God.

Now the feast of beleauened bread draweth nigh, which is called the Pascheouer.
 2 And the chiefe Priests and Scribes sought howe they might kill him; for they feared the people.
 3 * Then entred Satan into Judas surnamed Iscariot, being of the number of the twelue.
 4 And hee went his way, and communed with the chiefe Priests and captaines,

Geminus, Thomas (D. 1562)
Compendiosa Totius Anatomie Delineatio.

London: In officina Ioanni Herfordie, 1545.

First edition, folio, lacking five leaves: including the title page; dedication leaf [fleuron1]; first leaf of text [A1]; text leaves G4 & G5 (supplied in facsimile); and two plates (also supplied in photocopy facsimile): the folding engraving of Adam & Eve; and the plate showing female organs; thirty-eight (of forty) engraved plates are present in this copy, viz., three skeletal; sixteen muscular; five vascular; four neurological; five depicting organs; four of the brain; and one final plate which illustrates the anatomy of the eye, surgical tools, and a pig dissected; enhanced with the addition of three original pen-and-ink drawings on laid paper, drawn larger than the engravings, replicating plates 1, 2, and 9 portraying the muscular system, the first two folding, the last trimmed at calf level with loss of the drawing below; bound in modern half limp parchment with paper covers, sympathetically made, generally crisp with large margins, some underlining in text, one longer marginal note on a vascular plate; some spotting, closed tears, 14 1/4 x 10 1/2 in.

Geminus was inspired by Vesalius's landmark anatomical illustrations, and although he gives prominent credit, his renditions were published without authorization. Nonetheless, the absolute mastery of his work, its stature as the first English medical book with a suite of full-paged engravings, and only the second book printed in England to contain engravings of any kind, set it apart on several levels. One may surmise that the missing plates seemed too explicit for some set of tastes between 1545 and 2021. As a summary of Vesalius, an abridged version with full illustrations, it brought valuable and practical information to British physicians and surgeons without the heft.

Rotterdam: Arnold Leers, 1654.

First collected edition of the two texts, 12mo, four leaves from the index misbound with second signature of preliminary leaves (likely printed on the same sheet and not collated correctly by the binder) in the first work; illustrated with added engraved title and two full-paged engravings; bound in contemporary full English calf with gilt rulings; some marginal worming to inner gutter leaves; sewing structure perished, some signatures and leaves working loose, a good candidate for resewing and proper restoration, contemporary ownership inscription of Thomas Greenwood on ffep, 5 x 3 in.

“De Circulatione Sanguinis was first published with De Motu Cordis in 1654 and as the two works have usually been printed together since that date, their bibliographical history largely overlaps. [...] The argument [in De Circulatione] is not as tightly worked out as in De Motu Cordis but weaves around the theme of the movement of the blood in the arteries and veins and its immediate cause and manner. The points discussed are chosen to answer specific criticisms or to refute alternative notions.” (Keynes, pages 73-74)

Rueff, Jacob (1500-1558)

De Conceptu Et Generatione Hominis: De Matrice Et Eius Partibus.

Frankfurt: Sigismund Feyerabend, 1580.

Quarto, first edition with illustrations by Jost Amman, including a detailed birthing scene on the title, woodcut arms of the dedicatee, and seventy-three text woodcuts, several full-paged; bound in contemporary limp parchment (later pastedown and ffep to front), title toned, marginal corner tear with slight loss on folio 47, owner's signature to title, and a few other manuscript notes, 8 x 6 1/4 in.

According to Garrison and Morton, the 1580 edition of Rueff's practical obstetrical work, "contains the first true anatomical pictures in an obstetrics book." Rueff, as Zurich's official doctor, ordered that his book be given to all local practitioners attending women in labor, and asked that appropriate sections be read aloud in the birthing room as the delivery progressed. The manual was also geared to pregnant women themselves, a trend in pregnancy and childbirth literature that has served women for many centuries and is still in popular use today.

Paris: Charles Jombert, 1737-1753.

First edition, four large quarto volumes, illustrated with engraved titles to first and fourth volumes, bespoke hydraulics-themed head- and tail-pieces, and 219 folding engraved illustrations bound throughout the set (plates 10-19 in the fourth volume misbound after plate 34); uniformly bound in full contemporary sponge-decorated French calfskin with gilt-tooled spines and lettering pieces, generally good, some minor damage to heads and tails, a substantial set occupying nine inches of shelf space, 11 x 8 in. (4)

A fine set of Bélibor's substantial contribution to hydraulic engineering, and his greatest work, in Architecture Hydraulique, he uses integral calculus to solve the technical challenges of his designs.

Cleomedes (Fl. Circa 400 Ce); Ed.
Robert Balfour (C. 1553-1621)
Cleomedis Meteora Graece Et Latine.

Bordeaux: Simon Milangium, 1605.

First edition, quarto, title page printed in red and black with a block of type ornaments above the imprint, illustrated with text diagrams throughout, text in first section printed in Greek and Latin in parallel columns, divisional title page for Balfour's commentary, pagination and collation continuous, bound in parchment over boards, boards bowed, contents toned, some minor worming, 8 1/2 x 6 in.

Balfour was the principal of Guienne College in Bordeaux. He consulted a manuscript of Cleomedes' work from the Cardinal François de Joyeuse's (1562-1615) library. Cleomedes was an ancient Greek astronomer and author of On the Circular Motions of the Celestial Bodies, a blend of philosophy and science from a Stoic perspective. Through his extensive verbatim references to Posidonius of Rhodes (135-51 BCE), he has effectively preserved the work, which has not come down to us through any extant manuscripts. Cleomedes' work is valuable for its accurate observations on lunar eclipses, and the earliest clear explanation of the Sun and Moon Illusion, i.e., why the rising and setting bodies look larger at the horizon than they do when fully risen, even though their sizes do not change. Even this he attributes to Posidonius.

Second edition, small folio, [g]6, a-z6, A-Z6, Aa-Ff4, Gg6, final leaf blank but for printer's device and present in this copy; woodcut printer's device to title, illustrated with woodcut text diagrams; early ownership inscriptions removed from title at foot with some loss to blank area under the imprint (repaired on verso), title with marginal paper repairs to verso; 1cm trimmed at bottom of blank margin r3 & r4 (repaired with laid paper); short closed tear to bottom blank margin z1 (2 cm); browning and toning throughout, period marginalia amateurishly and incompletely washed away in several places, with staining, one longer note still legible; bound in modern limp parchment, period style, 11 1/4 x 7 1/2 in.

Provenance: Sold by English physicist and poet Edward Neville da Costa Andrade (1887-1971) at Sotheby's 1 August 1939, lot 692; purchased by Rosenbach; sold to William Marshall Bullitt (1873-1957) of Louisville Kentucky on 26 August 1939 (Bullitt collection pencil manuscript annotation mentioning the date and Rosenbach on ffep, confirmed by Rosenbach records).

This second edition of Copernicus's revolutionary work also contains Georg Joachim Rheticus's (1514-1574) Narratio Prima. In it, Rheticus, Copernicus's only pupil, introduces the concepts of his mentor's heliocentric model. It was published separately in 1540, and did not accompany the first edition of De Revolutionibus.

Galilei, Galileo (1564-1642)
Systema Cosmicum.

Lyon: Joannes Antonius Huguetan, 1641.

Second edition in Latin of Galileo's landmark Dialogus de Systemate Mundi, in quarto, *4-*4, A-Ddd4; illustrated with engraved title depicting an imagined dialogue between Aristotle, Ptolemy, and Copernicus; large engraved vignette on typographical title page; full-page engraved portrait of Galileo by Claude Audran; and text illustrations; ex libris French geophysicist, astronomer, and chronobiologist Jean-Jacques d'Ortous de Mairan (1678-1771), with his signature on both title pages; bound in contemporary limp parchment, some signatures browned, some spotting to contents; small name blind-embossed on engraved title (20th century); bookplate of Otto Orren Fisher inside front board, 9 x 6 1/2 in.

It was the publication of the present work that landed Galileo in hot water with the Holy See and into permanent house arrest until his death in 1642. The astronomer explores the relative merits of the heliocentric model in the form of a dialogue, as indicated by the title. Three characters present different viewpoints. Salviati is a heliocentric Copernican, Sagredo is neutral, and Simplicio is an adherent of the Aristotelian/Ptolemaic system that places the earth at the center of the universe. The arguments are mathematical, complicated, and at times speculative. Galileo sketches out his important theory of inertial frame of reference, a concept that has held up over the centuries, and much of the work is prescient and accurate. As an early work, it also contains unresolved loose ends, keeping subsequent scientists and observers on the job.

Ledermüller, Martin Frobenius (1719-1769)

Amusement Microscopique Tant Pour L'Esprit, Que Pour Les Yeux.

Nuremberg: Adam Wolfgang Winterschmidt, 1764, 1766. 1768.

First edition in French, thick quarto, three parts and supplement in one volume; illustrated with hand-colored frontispiece 150 hand-colored plates (a few printed in color), and two hand-colored folding plates; bound in full contemporary German marbled calf, with gilt tooling and lettering to the spine and blind rolled tooling to the boards, decorative paste decoration to page edges, contents very good; 9 1/2 x 7 1/2 in.

Ledermüller's beautifully hand-colored and fascinatingly arranged compositions, engraved after his own drawings, were inspired by the collection of natural history specimens in Bayreuth belonging to the Frederick, Margrave of Brandenburg-Bayreuth. Perusing the book, one recalls the childhood excitement of viewing samples under magnification for the first time. From butterfly wings, crystals, minute seashells, microscopic waterborne life forms, fabric, and botanical samples, to the human fingerprint, fleas, houseflies, and lice, all can be found in this volume, in vivid hand-color. Our guide to this miniature world also provides practical advice for building microscopes, and different ways of viewing slides and projecting images from the microscope for others to view.

First edition, three parts bound in two small folio volumes, illustrated with three engraved title pages, fine engraved portrait of the author by Visscher, another of Johann Ernst Rautenstein (1623-1666) by Sommeren; and seventy-eight engraved plates (plates 19/20 and 56/57 each contain two images per plate, numbered separately), most folding, others full-page; bound in uniform quarter mottled sheep with sponge-decorated paper boards, gilt spines with decoration and labels, some slight toning and scattered minor worming, very good, lacking one leaf presumed blank [second volume (A)1], one signature with added unnumbered and unsigned singlet (first volume signature Vvvvv has five leaves), 11 1/2 x 7 1/2 in. (2)

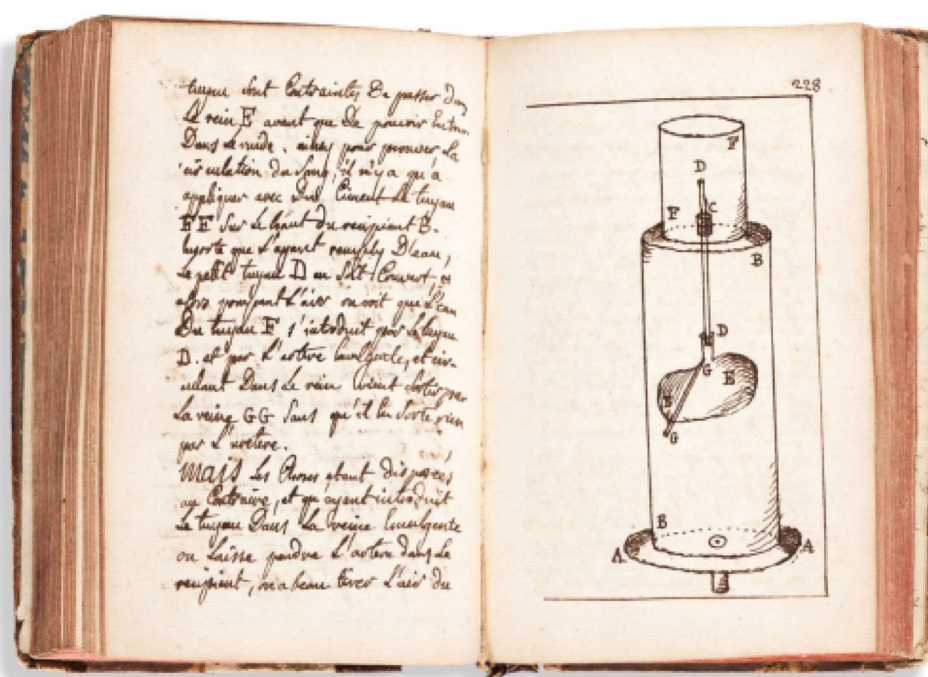

Lubieniecki was a Polish astronomer and historian with a special interest in comets and an influential group of colleagues and correspondents. In the present work, he shares his history of comets, beginning with those mentioned in the Bible, and including detailed accounts of the more recent comet that he personally observed in 1664 and 1665. Letters concerning those sightings are also published here, including his correspondence with Hevelius, Guericke, Gaspar Schott, and dozens of others.

Naples: Ignazio Russo, 1753.

First and only edition, quarto, woodcut emblem to title, illustrated with fifteen folding engravings illustrating the use of the proportional compass, and related tables; bound in contemporary parchment over stiff boards, title tooled in gilt directly on spine, very old ms. library shelf locations, 9 x 6 1/2 in.

The proportional or reduction compass is a device that facilitates the reduction, enlargement, or division of distances based on a set ratio. It has two legs, like a normal compass, but the pivot point can be adjusted by moving it along a channel cut in each leg. Once set, the change in size of a set figure can be made by consulting the needle points on the other end of the compass. A practical instrument for sculptors, craftsmen, and astronomers alike, its invention has been credited to Galileo, Hulsius, Jost Bürgi, and Fabrizio Mordente, although it was certainly used in antiquity, as one has been discovered in the charred remains of Pompeii.

Young Sultzer saw a twenty-six year-old female patient with gastric complaints. “Le bicorne rude avait été évacué en grande abondance par une jeune fille [...] à la suite d’un purgatif.” (Bottentuit) Under the microscope, the doctor observed these strange horned structures, the “bicorne rude” of the title, and concluded that he had discovered a new species of parasitic intestinal worm. Although Sultzer’s work was accepted by some contemporary colleagues, subsequent research revealed the mysterious horned parasite to be nothing more than seed of the black mulberry (Morus nigra), presumably eaten (in abundance) by his patient. German-Austrian hygienist and parasitologist Johann Gottfried Bremser (1767-1827) reviewed Sulter’s work and suggested that these worms looked very much like seeds, although he wasn’t sure of the variety. And thus the bicorne rude passed from parasite to pseudo-parasite.

Thomas was a Benedictine monk from Salzburg, who contributed some novel representations of the constellations in this work, described by the Linda Hall Library as, “one of the unsung treasures of celestial cartography.” The catalogers praise his rendering of Andromeda, and note the separate plate dedicated to Camelopardalis (a constellation of a camel). Indus and Pavo, seen in the southern sky, rarely achieved separate depiction. Thomas even invented the constellation Corona Firmiana to honor his patron, the Archbishop of Salzburg.

Oculus Artificialis Teledioptricus Sive Telescopium.

Wurzburg: Quirinus Heyl, 1685-1686.

First edition, folio, three parts in one volume, each title page printed in red and black, illustrated with added engraved general title, five folding engravings, twenty-six full-paged engravings, forty-one text engravings (many full-paged), and eight folding typographical tables; bound in full contemporary parchment over boards, contents generally good, 12 x 8 in.

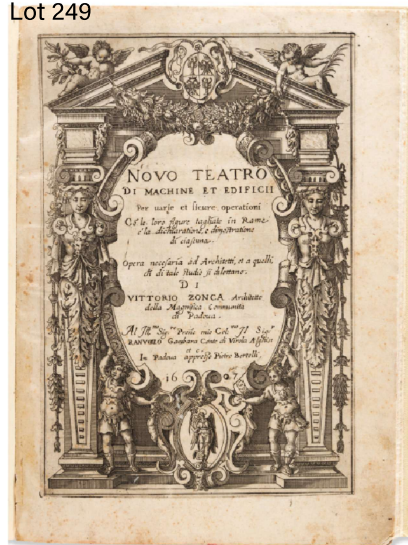

Zahn's important work on the telescope treats the subject of optics in detail at the moment of its great flourishing. Grinding lenses with precision and compounding their power brought everything from distant galaxies to microscopic lifeforms into focus. Imagine the excitement of discovery in this period. Even as modern people, we marvel at the world we see at the other end of the lens. Zahn also describes the camera obscura, lantern slides, and projection. With the right arrangement of lenses and mirrors, he showed how to project the image seen through a telescope or microscope onto a wall, along with other inventions, including a plan for a portable camera 150 years before a practical model was built.

Wu, L.T., Editor-In-Chief
China As She Is: A Comprehensive Album.

Shanghai: the Liang You Printing & Publishing Co., 1934.

Folio, the second impression, illustrated with twenty colored plates at the beginning, twenty-three divisional leaves illustrated with a color plate mounted on decorative paper spotted in gold; text photogravure illustrations in black and white throughout; text in Chinese and English, with sections on twenty-three regions including Hunan, Szechuan, Yunnan, Manchuria, Tibet, Mongolia, and others; bound in publisher's fancy textured cloth spine and boards, with folding maps with demographic charts on thin paper after the text; presented by Gene Kong Tang of General Electric to Judge Milton J. Helmick as a holiday present with flyleaf inscription, 12 1/2 x 8 1/2 in.

Judge Helmick (1885-1943) was appointed to a ten-year term at the U.S. Court for China in Shanghai in 1934. When the Japanese occupied the Shanghai Consulate in December of 1941, Helmick was taken prisoner and held for about six months before being returned to the States. After the U.S. relinquished its rights to territories in China, his position was effectively eliminated, but he returned to China in 1944 to familiarize himself with China's new legal system. He remained there, working for Standard Vacuum Oil in Shanghai until 1951. In the mid-1950s, he served as a Judge in North Africa, and ultimately retired to San Francisco.
